Sharing the Harvest

~An Interfaith Gathering~

"When you reap the harvest of your land, you shall not reap all the way to the edges of your field, or gather the gleanings of your harvest. You shall not pick your vineyard bare, or gather the fallen fruit of your vineyard; you shall leave them for the poor and the stranger"
Leviticus 19:9-10

- 🌀 Engage with people of other faiths and learn what their tradition says about welcoming others and sharing the harvest

With Rabbi Elisheva Salamo, Keddem Congregation; Shifu Jian Hu, Chung Tai Zen Center of Sunnyvale; and other faith leaders.

Sukkot is a week-long fall festival. During this period, it is tradition to build—and eat—in a Sukkah, a non-permanent outdoor hut, meant to recall the forty years the Israelites spent wandering in the desert. Sukkot was also once a holiday of agricultural thanksgiving, and this is celebrated with the holiday's other ritual items, the lulav and etrog. Sukkot is a time of reflecting upon priorities, the fragility and non-permanence of life, on welcoming strangers, and sharing the harvest with others.
